> ernment, however much the mode and manner of the interruption may have been in conflict with either Capt. Paulding's instructions or with the strict rules of international law. It is not prodable that these instructions contemplated the landing of the forces of the United States upon the soil of Nicaragua; but it is not probable either that the Government of Nicaragua will complain of the aggression.

> It is not our purpose now to inquire into this part of the transaction, or to consider what course the Admintration may think it right to pursue towards Capt. Paulding, with reference to the security of our own governcers abroad. These subjects will be appropriately dealt with, we have no doubt, in due time, and with a just regard to all the circumstances of the case. Our purpose now is more especially to point out to our readers that nothing whatever has occurred which ought to change the views of the President or the policy of the Adminisciate the grievous injury which lawless expeditions like that of Walker, must tend to inflict upon all our national interests, commercial and political, in Central America; and the popular judgment will doubtless also deterour national character and lawful objects in that quarter from Capt. Paulding's recent act. That officer acknowledges that he assumed a grave responsibility in ta-king the step he did; and throws himself upon the Administration, Congress, and the country for his justification. It is a bold and frank appeal, and will be met, we have no doubt, in a proper spirit.

In the mean time, we hope that those of our countrymen who direct their attention to the foreign policy of the United States will not forget that this policy can neither be wise nor successful, unless it is in conformity with justice and right, and in harmony with the established principles of international law. The same law of nations which exists for other countries exists also for our own, and, until we are prepared to submit to aggressions ourselves, we ought not to encourage aggres-

We can well understand the regret which exists in many portions of the Union, that the resources of Central America have not been more fully developed, and that the transit routes which connect the two oceans should be subject to so many difficulties and interruptions; but this development is not to be secured by the continuance of illegal expeditions against governments with whom we are at peace, and the safety of the transit routes is not to be accomplished by making them the scenes of violence and the prizes of successful war .-The peaceful policy of the President, as defined in his message to Congress, besides being the only policy on this subject which is consistent with the just rights of our neighbors, is the only policy, we verilly believe, under which anything valuable can be accomplished on this continent for America interests. We may fairly appeal, therefore, to every good citizen to give it his cordial support; and we may do so the more earnestly at this time when the condition of affairs in Kansas and Utah reminds us daily of the great value of legal restraints, and the great danger of weakening any of those bonds by which alone either individual or nation can live in peace and harmony together. We give no undue place in our esteem to these restraints: but what nation, or State, or society can exist without them? Neither do we under-estimate that spirit of progress which is so often invoked by the apologist for Walker. But we remember that the mission of our Republic is to teach the great lesson of self-government, and that this lesson is hardly to be taught by those whose conduct is opposed to law and in conflict with justice. Our great, our high duty" (it has been well said) "is to show, in our own example, that the spirit of free govit prostrates Principalities and Powers." Does any man
